

Compañía Sudamericana de Vapores (CSAV)

Compañía Sud Americana de Vapores (CSAV) is a Chilean shipping company that is currently the largest in Latin America.

CSAV, one of the oldest shipping companies in the world, was founded in 1872. The company's business initially consisted exclusively of coastal shipping services but these were rapidly extended along the whole west coast of South America to the Panama Canal before this was opened to regular traffic.

CSAV then extended the scope of its business to the United States, followed by Europe, the Far East and Japan, South-East Asia/Pacific Islands and the east coast of South America. The company today offers services for general and bulk cargo, fresh and frozen products and vehicles, using its own and chartered ships, and establishing permanent links between the Atlantic and Pacific coasts of South America and the rest of the world.

The growth in trade between the different regions of the world has been essential to the current and future development of all countries and other economic benefits. CSAV has therefore seized the opportunities generated by global sea trade, adapting its services to customer requirements and establishing new routes and services, managing to unite Latin America with the world's most important ports conveniently and efficiently.

CSAV operates in the five continents, offering line services for which it is able to provide permanent traffic to certain ports, fixed itineraries and ships designed for carrying large numbers of containers and a wide variety of conventional cargo. The company therefore has especially designed vessels for frozen cargo, vehicles, bulk cargo and forestry products. Intermodal services, which combine different means of transport, have been introduced by the company, as well as complementary services like port storage and services, etc. This door-to-door service, to any destination, is normally provided together with the CSAV subsidiaries: Sudamericana Agencias Aereas y Maritimas S.A. SAAM, as a cargo shipping agency and COSAN, a container terminal in Santiago.

The company's philosophy is principally to attain a superior level of service quality for its customers, by offering timely and efficient measures for helping them improve their foreign trade operations by making available to them all its installations, technology and services, and ensuring them of reliable carriage of their products to and from the principal areas of the world.
